Unrequited Love Impels Two Young People to Seek Solace in Death.

ACID AND CHLOROFORM USED

Young Woman Leaves Note to Her Brother and Litter Intimates That Quarrel With Sweetheart Was Reason for Girl Ending Life.

Cleveland.—Unrequited love impelled a young man and a woman to seek death Wednesday afternoon, and the latter was successful. Police of the W. 25th-st. station and physicians at German hospital saved the man's life.

Harold Donberg, 20, 1908 Holdemay went to the home of his sweetheart in W. 25th-st. in the afternoon with the police say, the intention of murdering her. When he learned she was not at home he wrote a note to his father saying he was tired of life.

Then he opened a vein in his wrist and drank chloroform. He was found in the hallway by the girl's mother who summoned the police. He was hurried to the hospital where a stomach pump was used. He later went home.

In his note young Donberg said: "Dear Daddy: I bid you all good-bye. I want to die. Give my love to all but Mack. She did what she accused me of doing."

Miss Rose Davis, 19, killed herself at the home of her brother, Jacob Davis, 274 E. 53rd-st. by drinking carbolic acid. Her sister-in-law found her lying on a bed and at first thought she was asleep.

The fumes of the acid apprised her of the true condition of affairs, and John I. Nunn's ambulance was called in which the girl was taken to St. Alexis' hospital, but she was dead.

She left a note which which is believed to explain her motive, but her brother, to whom it was addressed, refused to divulge its contents. He said, however, his sister and her sweetheart had quarreled Tuesday and intimated this was her reason for killing herself.

SHIP SINKS WITH 41

LINER MONROE AND STEAMER NANTUCKET IN COLLISION NEAR NORFOLK, VA.

NINETY-NINE ARE RESCUED

Survivors of Fatal Accident Arrive in Port and Describe Scenes Following Crash During Fog—Many Were Asleep in Berths.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 2.—Carrying 99 survivors of the Old Dominion liner Monroe, and the death toll of 41 more, the Merchants & Miners' steamship Nantucket came into port on Friday. The 99 survivors brought a story of suffering and sudden death from the sea.

The dead—Bolen, M., New York; Bolton, Mrs. W. L., Newark, N. J.; Budwig, H., New York; Claussen, W. C., Milwaukee; Curtis, Le Grande B., first lieutenant Second Coast artillery, Watervliet Arsenal, New York; Davis, F. C., Brooklyn; Edwards, J., United States navy; Gorman, Ed., Philadelphia; Gibson, Mrs. D., New York; Gilbert, J., New York; Harrington, Mrs. Thomas R., died after rescue; Haskell, J., Cortlandt, N. Y.; Hamburger, E., New York; Haviland, Miss, Marcara Theatre company; Ingram, Mr., Sumter, S. C.; Jelliff, Mr., Marcara Theatre company; Lewis, Mr., Marcara Theatre company; Marlo, Mr., Marcara Theatre company; Okamoto, J., Japanese; Potts, C. W., and wife, Gray, Va.; Pope, O., New York; Ray, J. F., and wife, New York; Seville, Miss, Marcara Theatre company; Smith, Zack C., New York; Snyder, Miss, New York; Tillet, Mr., Marcara Theatre company; Ver non, Mr., Marcara Theatre company; Wagner, O., United States Marine corps; Williamson, G., New York; Wilson, I., New York.

With a heavy canvas covering her crumpled bow and with a partially shifted cargo causing a list to starboard, the Nantucket docked while several thousand people waited for the survivors. Many of the rescued stood upon the deck wrapped in blankets. There were two dead among the saved.

The bodies were those of Mrs. Thomas Harrington, daughter of J. Kelly, 55 Stevens street, Norwalk, Conn., and Lieut. Le Grand B. Curtis of the Second Coast artillery.

Thomas Harrington of Bridgeport, Conn., husband of the dead woman, told a thrilling story of the wreck. Harrington and his wife were long in the water and the man was swimming with his wife's hair between his teeth when the two were picked up. Mrs. Harrington died from exhaustion after being hauled aboard the Nantucket.

P. Lyons was among the first of the passengers to come off the Nantucket. He gave a graphic description of the collision and the events that followed. "It was about 1:30 o'clock," said Lyons, "and very foggy. I had undressed, but had not gone to bed. The foghorn was blowing every minute. Suddenly it blew twice and repeated the double blast twice. Then, almost like putting on the brakes, the Monroe stopped, and I knew there was something the matter. Rushing on deck, I saw somebody getting ready to put a lifeboat over. I asked him if he didn't know, he replied that he didn't know, but wanted to be ready."

"Almost before the words left his mouth, the Nantucket struck us near the bow on the port side. I ran down stairs and tried to dress, but the ship was listing so that I could not stand up, so I hurried back up. There were very few passengers on deck and one boat was overboard. As it pushed away, Captain Johnson told me to jump in, as there was room for one more. I had to jump to make it and I left Captain Johnson standing on the deck of the ship. The boat went back and he got in. The Monroe went down easily, and was below the water within twelve minutes after the collision.

"There were many people who must have been caught in their staterooms," continued Lyons.

"The Nantucket stood by us and those of us who could climbed up her rope ladder. Those who were not able to follow us were lifted with ropes placed under their arms.

Captain Johnson of the sunken Monroe and all his officers but one were among the saved. The lost officer was Second Officer Gatley.

Among the passengers on the Monroe was James O'Connell, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor. He was saved.

While the Nantucket backed off, lowered boats and began sweeping the misty sea with her searchlights, the Monroe, her passengers picked out of berths in nightclothes, sank like a plummet. In the swirling vortex of the sinking ship men shouted and women screamed through the mist. The Monroe went down so quickly there was little time for launching boats, and it is believed the only ones saved were those picked up at once by the Nantucket.

Panama, Jan. 29.—Frederick W. Vanderbilt's yacht Warrior, which has been on a winter cruise in southern waters, was wrecked on Tuesday off the northwest coast of Colombia, between Savanilla and Santa Marta. Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt and their guests, the duke and duchess of Manchester and Lord Falconer, were taken off the yacht by the United Fruit steamer Almirante.

The Vanderbilt's staunch cruising yacht, the Warrior, lies pounding on the shore off Cape Aguila with a steamer of the United Fruit company's Almirante standing by to take off the crew in the case the boat goes to pieces. The yacht was ashore for hours before her wireless operator received any response to his signals.

The Vanderbilt party was bound for Colon when a heavy storm broke over them. Wrecking tugs were sent from Kingston, Jamaica, and Colon, Panama.

The present cruise followed a dinner party at the Ritz-Carlton in New York December 22 in honor of the duke and duchess of Manchester. The latter was formerly Miss Helen Zimmerman, of Cincinnati. F. of L. as "fossilized" and "boozefighters," Mr. Gompers declared that, although he owns up to sixty-four years, he is as well preserved as any man of his age and that eight of the eleven men on the executive council are total abstainers.

S. M. CULLOM DIES

EX-SENATOR FROM ILLINOIS SUCCEEDS TO GENERAL BREAKDOWN AFTER SIX WEEKS.

FAMILY WAS AT THE BEDSIDE

Aged Statesman Was Unconscious When End Came—Had Been in Public Life for Over 50 Years—Funeral From Springfield, Ill.

Washington, Jan. 30.—Former Senator Shelby M. Cullom of Illinois died here on Wednesday after an illness of more than a week.

His last words were a wish that he might have lived to see the completion of the national memorial to Abraham Lincoln, who was his personal friend.

The end came as a result of a general breakdown after the aged statesman had fought against death for six weeks. When forced to take his bed the ex-senator's strength slowly began to ebb. He clung tenaciously to life after he had been given up several times. He was unconscious when death came.

At the bedside when the end came were Miss Victoria Fisher, sister of the two deceased wives of the senator, and William Barrett Ridgeley, son-in-law.

The former senator is survived by two granddaughters, Mrs. Katherine Ridgely Brown, wife of Phelps Brown of Springfield, Mass., and Mrs. Eleanor Ridgely Parker, wife of Dr. Henry P. Parker of this city.

Brief funeral services were held at the Cullom home Thursday, and at 11:45 o'clock the body was taken to Springfield, Ill., for interment on Saturday.

Former United States Senator Shelby M. Cullom of Illinois was a figure of national importance for more than thirty years, and held public office for more than half a century.

He began his political career in 1856, when after being admitted to the Illinois bar he was elected city attorney for Springfield. Almost immediately he was elected a member of the house of representatives of the Illinois legislature and was re-elected in 1860, serving until 1865, when he was elected to the national house of representatives. He served in the Thirty-ninth, Fortieth and Forty-first congresses, from December 4, 1865, to March 3, 1871. He went back to Illinois and again was elected to the state legislature in 1872, serving until 1875. In 1871 and 1873 he was elected speaker of the state house of representatives. He was elected governor of the state in 1875 and succeeded himself in 1880. He served until February 5, 1883, when he resigned, having been elected to the United States senate. He took his seat on December 4, 1883, and served continuously until March 3, 1913.

The Cullom family, like the Lincoln family, were Kentuckians who emigrated to Illinois early in the thirties. Shelby Moore Cullom was born in Wayne county, Kentucky, on November 22, 1829.

SECRETARY BRYAN STOPS WORK OF IMMIGRATION BODY.

State Department Feels Work Would Be Hampered If Legislation Inimical to Japan Is Enacted.

Washington, Jan. 31.—The delicacy of the situation existing between the United States and Japan was strikingly illustrated when a telephone message from Secretary of State Bryan to the house immigration committee stopped all further consideration of the Baker exclusion bill.

The state department message was in the nature of an ultimatum, it was reported.

Secretary Bryan informed Chairman Burnett that the department considered it imperative that the legislation which might irritate friendly nations in the east be dropped for this year.

Later it became known that Secretary Bryan's action came as the result of a conference he held earlier in the day with Viscount Chinda, the Japanese ambassador, who called at the state department to confer with the secretary concerning the Japanese situation.

Secretary Bryan declined to make any comment on his reasons for telephoning the house committee.

U. S. MAY INTERVENE

Exporters Ask Secretary Bryan To Take Steps To Stop Triangular Revolution Now in Hayti.

Western Newspaper Union News Service.

New York.—A movement that may crystallize in radical action by the United States with the result that this government may intervene in Hayti for the protection of American interests in that republic, has been started by prominent exporters who addressed a communication to the secretary of state requesting that immediate steps be taken to stop the triangular revolution now in progress there. The National City bank recently made representations to the state department that American interests in Hayti were imperiled because of the overthrow of President Oreste and his ministry. The bank is heavily interested in the railroad system in Hayti, the operation of which has been practically suspended.

That the revolutionists continue to conduct a guerilla warfare in their advance on Port au Prince, each leader seeking to reach there first so as to occupy the president's palace, is evidenced by code cable dispatches received in New York.

One of these stated that 11 laborers who had been forced into the revolutionary army at Trou sought to escape to their families and all were captured and beheaded, their heads being nailed to posts as a warning to their fellows. In retaliation for this barbarism, two officers of Gen. Beland's force were assassinated by women relatives of some of the victims.

STORM DOES GREAT DAMAGE.

Many Sections of State Still Isolated From Effects of Recent Storm.

Columbus, O.—Many sections of the state were still isolated as a result of the storm which swept Ohio, but telephone and telegraph officials expressed the hope that communication will be restored. The storm wrought its vengeance on wires mainly throughout the western and northwestern part of the state, although other sections were affected. An official of a telephone company estimated that the company alone had about 2,000 poles down and about 800 miles of wire on the ground. A line drawn from Platan to Bellefontaine, to Marion thence to Bucyrus, Noyahk and Lorain surrounds the section in which the greatest damage was done. Findlay is completely isolated from the rest of the world and it is only by rerouting messages that communication has been established in other cities.

Canton.—Pinned for three-quarters of an hour beneath a switch engine at the B. & O. crossing in Navarre-st. S. W. Salvato Filippino, 35, crossing tender, dictated a last message to his family and had the service for the dying administered to him as a large crowd looked on. Rev. J. L. Waldeisen, assistant pastor of St. Mary's Catholic church, crawled through mud and clinders under the engine tender to give the dying man the last sacrament by the light of a torch taken from the locomotive cab.

Filippo lay helpless, crushed about the waist and legs. The engine finally was lifted with jacks and he was extricated.
